“ You just knew I was going to be a boy before I was born, I was told. And as it was said to me, the doctor lifted me up, you hollered, “it’s a boy!”, and the doctor said it’s a girl. You responded “what I always wanted!” and run down to the gift shop and got a little rag doll for me, that I have to this day. Growing up, I was a big tomboy, so daddy got to have a hunting and fishing buddy after all. Some of the best memories I have are you, mom and me riding four-wheelers, or me waking up in deer woods. This of course after you wrapped me in a blanket and tossed me in the truck to go hunting and at some point I’d wake up in the woods ready to go. Mom and I were just talking about the time you and I ran through the woods of the Smokey Mountains to get a picture of a bear! Of course I was a girl and grew up into a TEENAGER, which of course caused all kinds of havoc, I’m sure. But you always loved me I know. And you did eventually get your boy... 2 in fact, in the form of 2 handsome grandsons. I know you were so proud of those boys!

Nothing can be said that can appropriately express our grief and sorrow. You were taken all too soon, I think. The boys are torn up right now, and couldn’t stand to see their pawpaw that way. I can only have some peace in knowing this horrific thing you had to endure is over.

I love you, Dad. I’ll miss you every day. ❤️
