“ Anne was such a great inspiration to me. I was a student at Morrilton High School and I had Anne for English one year, and Journalism for two years. She taught me to love reading and writing, which coincidentally led me to major in English and become a teacher, as well as a writer. In high school, my writing mostly consisted of poetry and articles for the high school newspaper, but after receiving my BA in English, I started working on my first teen/young adult book series, and I credit Anne for helping me achieve that goal. Additionally, I taught English and Journalism to middle and high school students - same as Anne. Now, I'm working as a Children/Teen Librarian at my local library, where I continue to spread the importance of reading and writing through various youth reading/writing programs. About 10 years ago, I reached out to Anne to let her know what an inspiration she has been to me. I'm glad I got the chance to tell her how she touched my life. Anne, you will forever be remembered. You impacted so many lives. To know you is to love you! My heart is saddened by your passing, but I know your spirit will live on through people (such as myself) who continuously pass down your love for reading and writing to future generations. My thoughts and prayers are with your family today. You will be greatly missed by everyone who knew you. RIP Anne Crofoot Queen!

“ I was saddened to read of the passing of Anne Crofoot Queen. As my English teacher in 11th and 12th grade, her contribution to my education was deep, lasting, and memorable. Mrs. Crofoot always challenged students to dream bigger and reach higher. More notably, though, she had the rare gift of being able to present broad ideas and higher order skills in ways that teenagers from a small town could readily grasp. The effectiveness of her teaching was evident my freshman year of college, during which I learned virtually nothing new in either semester of English composition! Mrs. Crofoot had already taught me to write effectively and interpret texts both critically and empathetically. She instilled in me a love of learning and an ability to write that have stayed with me to this day. We have lost a consummate educator, but her legacy lives on in the lives of hundreds of former students whom she successfully challenged and encouraged and whom she dared to excel in their chosen professions.

“ I have often said that Mrs. Crofoot was a wonderful teacher. She challenged me to be a better person, to strive to give my best, & certainly to be a better student. I appreciate her life more than I can say in a few words. Her outgoing personality & smile was a fixture in Morrilton for many years. My heart & prayers go out to the family.

“ It was such a pleasure and privilege to have Anne Crofoot Queen as a friend, one that really earned family status. My mother (Edith Foster) and Anne were blessed with a special friendship and enjoyed many fun times together, including trips to visit me in Vienna, Scotland and Hilton Head Island. Anne so loved her life with Bennie and was so proud of Martha, John and her grandchildren. What a marvellous role model! I will miss you, Carolyn
