“ I was so very very sad to just see this. Cathy and I were friends for many years, meeting at the University of Arkansas in the early 80's while both majoring in theatre. Then we both embarked on an adventure of a lifetime and moved to Seattle together and were roommates for two years. We relied on each other to get through some tough times in those first years in the Northwest, and then Cathy met Mike and they married and she went on to a new chapter in her life and so did I returning to graduate school and moving to Memphis. Cathy never went on Facebook and we lost touch over the years, I'm embarrassed to say. I vowed many time over the years to get in touch with her, and this is another example of the importance of not procrastinating because it could be too late. Cathy was a talented and loving and kind friend - she was one of the first truly passionate animal-lovers I knew. And she was a brave role model for those in the blind community. She will always be very significant part of my life. Prayers to her family, and may she rest in peace.
