“ We spoke with David on the morning of March 17, his last day, around 8:30 a.m. He gave us a clipping from the Wye Mountain Daffodil Festival, which was a kind act. His spirit of giving was also shown to us on numerous occasions during the festival, including a present of smoked turkey and venison. The last words he spoke to us were: "I have to go home and wake up my bride". Although we knew David for a short time, we admired his generosity, tenacity and unflappable energy, even when he was probably too tired to be out doing his duties. We considered him a friend.
