“ I am very sorry to hear of Earnestine's death. My father and her were 1st cousins, though they never knew one another. I met her in the early 1990's and visited her every time I was in Morrilton. She would let me drive her to the Brents' reunions. I quickly grew to love & appreciate her. Death is an unfortunate part of this life, and I am sad to hear this. I would have come to the funeral/ burial had I known about it. She was so gracious & hospitalable to me when I was re-connecting with the Arkansas Brents. She told me about her family, of my great-grandfather (Simon Alexander Brents), and even had a picture of him, which she let me copy. William and my grandfather (James Harrison Brents) were brothers. It is unfortunate that our families have never had the chance to get to know one another.

God bless you in this time of sorrow.

“ I learned to love Faye from the first moment I met her. Her deeply ingrained, southern hospitality in conversation and behavior was so very refreshing, gentle, and different from the way so many people act today. I got to be with her when she couldn't hear very well, before Sandy Kohlbrecher bought Faye her hearing aids that helped so very much. I loved Faye's way of dealing with adversity. She was tough and she didn't complain. Her work with the quilting ladies was beautiful. I miss Faye and I thank God that I knew her!
