“ She was my beloved grandma, who took me in. She played the organ and enjoyed when I sang for her. Her favorite things were (in my time with her) watching TV from afar, with a cigarette and a glass of coca cola.

She had a unbreakable bond with my father, and extended that love to me. She told me many things about her past, along with details of my father as a child. Her voice was beautiful. She liked to dance, even though she didn't often. She barely ever cussed and she hated confusion. She was known all over Arkansas.

My grandma took great care to protect the family members who were burdened by life. The ones who struggled. Her home was always clean and open. It seemed to always be sunny when she was near, and raining when she went to visit friends or other churches.

Grandma saw the positive in even foul people. It took a lot to anger her, and her anger was moreso felt than heard. She could diffuse drama instantly. She could encourage and inspire anyone.

My grandma is solely responsible for the greatest times of my life, and I will always and forever miss her.

I feel sorry for those who didn't know her.

Love you Grandma, may we meet again someday.
